 31. "10" Rapport was so good that Respondent, although extremely vain, said things which, according to his own evaluation, did not throw a favorable light upon him. It started out by being excellent, and it did not deteriorate.
 32. I rate him "10" on this score and yet I am convinced that he told me many lies. But he didn't know that he was lying. He is an "outstanding sportsman" (motorcycle racer) and so used to being in the limelight that he is constantly under the impression that powerful reflectors are focused upon him and cannot help seeing himself being photographed. In other words, he always sees the image others might have of him. If I wanted to be matter of fact, I would say that I very much doubt the part Respondent said he played during and after the Revolution.
